I have been working in the computer software industry for many years. I started a small software business in 1982. I wrote the first computerized guitar tab program in the U.S. Then I wrote the first version of a keystrokes translator and subsequently an autocorrect program. In 1985 I started working on a search engine for newspapers. I also started working with Microsoft during its infancy. I became the Software Developer for the IBM Personal Computer in 1984. Over the years I developed various software products, including software for children. From 1993 to 1995 I served as the Vice President of Software for a small software company. I recently started a new business venture, LuvCandy Productions, which specializes in making websites. I have been a computer programmer for most of my life. I have created software products for business and personal use. I have also written articles, books and manuals for my readers. I have been in the computer software industry for over 28 years. I have done it all: making software, writing articles, designing websites, and programming. I've written software for businesses of all sizes, from individuals to large corporations. I have been a practicing Christian all my life. I have been married since 1994. I enjoy a variety of art, music, literature, movies, and sports. There's a lot of talk about cars and their impact on the environment. But as with so much else, we need to think about the role of the tires in the equation. A lot of folks think of tires as something on the wheels that just get you from A to B. And as we head to 2010 and the phasing out of old-fashioned internal combustion engines, the quality of the fuel in and out of the automobile is an important part of the equation. We buy tires because they get us from A to B
